WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13, 1867.

between the preservation of their honor, with the advantage of an effective appeal to the Northern people, which thick-coming events promise to render all-sufficient, and then making sacrifice of both honor and advantage. Those to whom the choice seems different leave out of view what we account the ruling consideration in the case. They ignore the object of the military scheme and the determination of Congress to effect the object.

The North, as our Albany contemporaries say, is the real theatre of the deliverance of the Southern people. The South can serve herself only by quickening the Bluegrass region where the waters of the Big Sandy have its "eastern shore railroads and manufactures are all the talk, and everywhere the ringing bell tolls of the improvements that are in rapid progress.

How different the scene a few years ago. Then, instead of the sounds of prosperity and progress, the keen crack of rifle and the heavy, ominous thunder of artillery reverberated through the hills of "My old Kentucky home."

Along the line of the Kentucky Central railroad, especially the Louisville and the round of the papers, both in America and the country, headed "Curious Love-Bouquet in the Life of Abraham Lincoln," which was constrained to give a résumé in the Life of Lincoln, exhibits him as the man he really is—his bearing toward his wife, his treatment of his son, his love for his family, his easy conversation with those who are admitted into that circle. There are to be found the best tests by which a man is a character and feelings are to be determined, and no one enjoys better opportunity to be educated than those who are familiar with the illustrious martyr, by representing him as one who was desolate of those finer feelings and affections which must necessarily adorn the character of every truly great and good man.

I have recently received the following letter from the author of that article, which, in my opinion, is not the best way to find out the character of a man:

"Dear Sir—I wish to ask of you a few questions. They are as follows:—

"1. What year did you come to Springfield, Illinois, as a preacher of the First Presbyterian Church?

"2. What year did you become a member of the First Congregational Church?"

"3. What year did you become a member of the First Methodist Church?"

"4. What year did you become a member of the First Baptist Church?"

"5. What year did you become a member of the First Universalist Church?"

"6. What year did you become a member of the First Unitarian Church?"
